

ABSTRACT

An optical element is placed in the alignment beam during alignment. The optical element serves to focus the alignment beam onto the substrate alignment mark when it is at a different focal length from the front surface of the substrate.